CHANGES

In Officials of B. & O. Road Still Continue.

Although there is an understanding that there are to be no wholesale disthing going on which has started many of the officials to guessing where they are at. The resignation of Superintendent Graham, of the Connellsville division, and Mechanical Superintendent J. N. Barr come in continuity. and are taken as "something in the Mr. Barr resigns to go with the Erle railroad under President F. D. Underwood, who left the Baltimore & Ohio to take charge of the affairs of the Erie system.

On the Baltimore & Ohio, President Loree has taken his close friends with him to fill the most important positions. He was always close to G. L. Potter, L. G. Hans and others who are to fill high positions with the Baltimore & Ohio Substant'al proof of the fact that it is the intention of the men now at the head of the Baltimore & Ohio to be aggressive and progressive is appareut in the policy which President L. F. Loree is pursuing. President Loree has sanctioned the plans prepared by the Baltimore & Ohio and Pittsburg & Western civil engineers some months ago, and the work will be pushed to completion without delay. Many important contracts have been let for improvements on the main line and on the Pittsburg division, and an order for $3,000,000 worth of new equipment will be given out this year.

Between Wheeling and Benwood some sweeping changes are contemplated. The loop and bridge are to be eliminated, and a direct line via the Ohio River Railroad established. The Baltimore & Ohio is now practically in control of the Ohio River railroad, and it is to be made part of the through car line between Pittsburg and Cincinnati and St. Louis.

RECIPROCITY

Was the Keynote of President Mc-Kinley's Last Public Utterance.

Special to the Leader.

Washington, D. C., Sept. 27.-Reciprocity wasthe key-not of the last public utterance of William McKinley. charges of Baltimore & Ohio employes Reciprocity is the tonic that has alunder the new management, yet it ready engaged the earnest attention of would appear as if there was some- President Roosevelt and his cabinet. Modification of the tariff along conservalive lines is admittedly the great and growing economic question for both Congress and the dominant party it represents. The late Chief Magis trate demonstrated in his farewell remarks at Buffalo that he had devoted long study and deep thought to the outlines of a policy that, at first blush, seems repugnant to Republican doctrine. But a careful consideration of the matter will disclose that modification of duties is the logical outcome of a tariff for the protection of infant industry. That Mr. McKinley had reached the conclusion that a new system of tariffs, framed on the give and take principle, had become a neeasity was plainly manifested in his last words of advice to his party and his country. Since Mr. Rooscvelt voluntarily of> fored to follow in the footsteps of his predecessor and to carry the McKinley policies to completion, the reclprocity question is naturally taking precedence in the deliberative counciis at the White House. And there is no doubt that it will be presented to the coming Congress, in concrete form at the proper time. While in a general way the policy of which the elebrated Plumed Knight of the Pine Free State was the father and adov1 cate is not complicated, it will require careful nandling. That there will be opposition to the reduction of duties from certain portions of the country and from those industries which do not yet feel able, or at least inclined to forego the benefits of protection, there is not the slightest doubt. In a sense, the change contemplated is radical. But Republican leaders are confident that, with the exercise of good judgment, reciprocity treaties can be so arranged that no hardship will be imposed upon enterprises still in need of a safeguard against the ruinces competition of underpaid foreign labor. Mr. Roosevelt has long been a deep student of economic problems and will, it is stated by those who have conferred with him, devote his efforts to the formulation of a plan which will find expression in his coming message to Congress.

The prosperous state of the country is reflected in the reports from the Treasury and in the information conveyed to the President by Secretary to resume his vacation which was interrupted by the lamentable traxedy at Buffalo, Mr. Gage explained at the White House his arrangements to relieve the money market by the purchase of bonds and the increase of Government deposits in the national banks. Mr. Roosevelt expressed himself as pleased with the steps taken and fully approved the plans of the secretary to meet exigencles that may develop during his absence. Since September 1st, the available cash balance in the Treasury has increased $8,000,000, the amount now being held $188,000,000. Up to September 23rd, the surplus was nearly $9,000,000 for that period alone, and since July 1st, it has grown to be over $14,000,000. For the same period of 1900, the surplus amounted to only $2,500,000.

It will be a long time before Washington thoroughly accustoms itself to the loss of President McKinley, While grief is still keen and will not be thoroughly effaced during this generation, all are gratified with the dignity and sympathetic torbearance of the new Executive, who has taken the reins of government under extraordinary "t multions. Republicans are convinced that they have a strong man who has stepped into the breach to complete the work so well developed by the statesman who twice led them to victory and endowed the nation with presperity.

Mr. Roosevelt has in a very few carded his alleged strenuousness as casily and naturally as he laid aside the uniform of war when peace had a wall of water twenty feet high course, will not completely lose his individuality in the great office to which he was so suddenly elevated. It would be a physical impossibility for Theodore Rocsevelt to do that, and, in truth, none would wish him to suppress the American vim that led him into battle for his country's honor, that made him triumphant in his contest for the Governorship of the Em-uncompromising and vigorous patriotism. Some have been moved to criticise Mr. Roosevelt mildly and regretfully for dismissing the men pro vided as a body-guard for the President. The new Chief Magistrate, his friends declare, is fully able to take care of himself in an emergency and espionage is absolutely distasteful to him. During his walks and his horseback rides he desires to be alone and insists that he shall be unaccompan-

The notoriously pessimistic press has been dealing harshly with Commander Seaton Schroeder, insinuating that his duties as the Governor of the island of Guam, one of America's and Wednesday newest possessions, had not been satisfactorily performed and that he would not be continued at that post. Notwithstanding, Seceretary Long has issued orders to Commander Schroeder to return to the island as the head of its government. Officials of the Navy Department state briefly, when asked about the case, that the Secretary's order is a complete refutation of the rumors that Mr. Long was dis- ning to be held in Andrews Hall. All pleased with Schroeder for enforcing the discipline of his command. The situation in the taraway island demanded extraordinary treatment and gin at half past seven. Commander Schroeder was equal to the occasion, although he has been rewarded by vituperation from certain quarters for the performance of an unpleasant duty. business at the White House irrespective of party affiliations, than the retention of Mr. George B. Corteloyu by President Roosevelt as his secretary, Mr. Cortelyou having acted in that capacity for the late President. As Mr. Roosevelt had his own secretary, who had long been confidentially associated with him at Albany and elsewhere, it was prophesied that Mr. Cortelyou would not be retained; but Mr. Roosevelt paid a delicate tribute to the departed Unief Magistrate by the re-appointment. Mr. Cortelyou won Mr. McKinley's affection by his fidelity and his intefatigability. To the late Executive he was more than a mere official assistant; he was a friend, companion and astute adviser. It has been said that Mr. Cortelyou would have eventually succeeded to a cabinet position, had Mr. McKinley lived. The devotion of the Secretary to the President at Buffalo is one of the beatuiful chapters of that story of tears. All heroes do not win commissions or wear shoulder straps.
